She began with a year of advanced language study at the Beijing Language Institute in 1986, and then went on to manage factories for an American company in China, was General Manager of an export firm in Hong Kong, and later moved to California where she directed the international manufacturing, importing, and costing programs for a major company doing business in Asia. This was followed by over five years in accounting, finance, and management consulting, first at a large regional CPA firm. Kimberly is currently the founder, President, and CEO of Office Outsource Inc., an innovative resource and consulting firm. She also founded China Resource Network, a peer-to-peer training group for executives in the U.S. who are working with China.
